Mounted Versus Un-Mounted Rubber Stamping

If you are new to the hobby of rubber stamping, you are probably wondering how to go about choosing the best stamps for your collection. With so many options available, how will you ever decide which stamp to choose? Choosing the perfect stamps for your crafting needs can be an exciting experience. However, if it is your first time any type of stamps, you will want to decide whether or not you need mounted or un-mounted. Do not get overwhelmed by the decision. Help is here!

Mounted Rubber Stamps

Mounted rubber seem to be the most popular choice for those with creative minds. These will have the rubber "picture" (otherwise known as a die) on the bottom and include some type of "handle" as which you apply the stamp with. Although the handle is usually made of wood, it can also be metal or some other material. Most wood mounted stamps boast a picture of the appliqué on top of the wood helping you to know what picture you are applying to your creation. Mounted rubber stamps are easier to use than the alternative and therefore are the most popular.

Un-mounted Rubber Stamps

While mounted stamps are the choice of many, there are also some advantages to choosing un-mounted stamps. The first advantage is that the un-mounted stamps take up less space. With some stamps being very large, this is an attractive advantage for those who may not have enough storage space in their craft room or home. Another advantage to using un-mounted stamps is that they cost less than their counterparts. Artists on a tight budget often prefer these even though they are more difficult to use. If you are just starting out and are not sure if you will have a passion for the hobby, un-mounted rubber stamps are a great way to begin. If you decide that rubber stamping is something you can enjoy for years to come, you can then turn to the more expensive, mounted stamps.

It is relatively simple getting started in the hobby of rubber stamping and the possibilities for your artistic creations are endless. The first step is choosing the perfect stamps to begin what will be a life-long collection of stamps. Mounted and un-mounted stamps can get the job done when it comes to creating masterpieces. Choose the one that works best for your crafting needs. It doesn't hurt to include both in your collection. Find what works for you!
